

Abstract of the Invention

A mask for attachment to an eyeglass frame. A preferred embodiment of the present invention provides a mask formed from paper by paper-cutting. The mask includes two attachment members integrally formed with the mask. The attachment members then bend inward to secure over the eyeglass frame. The mask is also able to bend to allow it to be secured to differing sizes of eyeglass frames as well as shapes of individual heads.

5